LITERATURE (LITR1-UC)

LITR1-UC 6201 Contemporary Global Literature (4 Credits)
Typically offered occasionally
This course introduces contemporary global literature from a variety of cultural and historical perspectives. Selections may include contemporary works from Asia (east and/or south), the Middle East, Europe, Africa, the Caribbean or North and South America. Students practice techniques of close reading, evidence use, and other forms of literary analysis to engage critically and creatively with works in various genres from around the world.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: No

LITR1-UC 6205 Race in Historical & Literary Imagination (4 Credits)
An interdisciplinary course that examines representations of race and racism in a variety of historical and literary texts written from the Civil War to the present. The course situates readings in historical contexts, examining how figurative, metaphoric, and narrative patterns have shaped historical reality. Texts include novels, poems, humorous tracts, historical accounts, and contemporary journals.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: No

LITR1-UC 6207 Melville's Moby Dick (2 Credits)
Students read and analyze one of the richest works in American literature. They learn increasingly complex skills of literary analysis by seeking out the relationship between the realistic depiction of 19th-century life at sea and the mythical structures in this work. The use of language, including musicality and linguistic play, is explored.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: No

LITR1-UC 6209 Oral Traditions in Literature (4 Credits)
For thousands of years, humans learned their history, science, religious beliefs, customs, and laws only through oral stories. Contact with writing cultures changed all that. The cultural significance of most oral forms were transformed, if not destroyed, by European written literature. This course explores the question of how bards, singers, and shamans from those preliterate cultures kept alive the vitality, language, and communal aspects of their ways of knowing. In this course students will encounter the cultural contexts and performance modes of various oral traditions as well as the implications of their transformation from voice to written forms. Students may study oral stories from Aboriginal, African, Caribbean, Native American, South American, or other storytelling traditions.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: No

LITR1-UC 6212 Modernism and Literature (4 Credits)
Bursting from the corsets of Victorian constraint, the 20th century is said to be the century of alienation, transformation, and disintegration. Yet 20th-century writers were freed to create new forms, break conventional patterns, explore new realms for meaning and new possibilities for writing. At its beginning, writers such as Stein, Joyce, and Eliot worked against the grain of received language, embodied ideas in new ways, and dismantled conventional language. At its midpoint, two world wars, world economic depression, the Holocaust, and Hiroshima-displayed daily in film and print-destroyed our confidence that language could ever be adequate to name human experience. Yet writers such as Faulkner, O'Connor, Yeats, Stevens, Hemingway, Beckett, Ellison, Baldwin, and Morrison each find new ways to reawaken our sense of ourselves in our world.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: No

LITR1-UC 6215 Contemporary Arabic Literature (4 Credits)
This course offers an overview of contemporary Arabic literature. Starting with pre-Islamic genres, we move to twentieth-century literature and read works by such seminal authors as Naguib Mahfouz, Mahmud Darwish, and Adonis. We will examine a variety of themes that had important repercussions on the aesthetic and ideological development of Arabic literature. This course is divided into sections on East/West relations, Arab-Israel conflict, and women experiences.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: No

LITR1-UC 6220 Performance: Comparative Genres (4 Credits)
Focusing on both the performance's poetry and narration, this course explores how performance is distinguished from other literary and the rules that govern it and theater in different cultures. Students examine the relationships among ritual, performance, and drama. They both read and attend live performances from Greece, Britain, the United States, Japan, India, and Africa.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: No

LITR1-UC 6223 Epic: Comparative Genres (4 Credits)
While this course emphasizes the epic, the problematic nature of the concept of "genre" asks that we study the historical and developmental controversies which have emerged from the very idea of "epic." What, in fact, is epic? What special skills do we need to read and understand the qualities which distinguish the epic from other modes of story telling? What distinguishes it from other forms of narrative poetry? This course focuses on the social and historical conditions from which the concepts of epic emerge and evolve.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: No
LITR1-UC 6225 Studies in Genres: Poetry & Narrative (4 Credits)
Typically offered occasionally
In this course, students will examine the major definitions and theories of 'genre' while focusing our attention on selected poetic and narrative forms through a number of key questions including: what makes poetry different from prose and how do poetic modes differ from prose modes? Are their different narrative conventions of 'voice' and perspective between poetic modes and narrative modes? Are there different uses of language? Do the distinctions between 'genres' reveal a 'deep structure' that cuts across cultures, or are genres culture specific? What special kinds of reading skills are required in order to read and appreciate poetry and narrative? By examining a number of literary contexts, students will learn what makes a story a narrative and what makes a poem a 'poem'. Students will reflect upon the importance of such literary structural distinctions from a series of social, political, and psychological perspectives.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: No

LITR1-UC 6232 Postcolonial Literatures (4 Credits)
Typically offered occasionally
This course examines colonialism's effects on literary articulations of history, identity, tradition, and belief. It explores new forms of consciousness and expression produced in the encounter between European colonizers and colonized people in the Caribbean, the Middle East, India, and other parts of Africa and Asia.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: No

LITR1-UC 6241 Introduction to Literature (4 Credits)
Typically offered occasionally
In this introduction to literary analysis, students will become active readers of literature. Together they will explore how to attend carefully to language, sound, syntax, structure, rhythm, musicality, and patterns. Students will learn the specific distinctions between the three major literary genres: poetry, drama, and fiction. In becoming close readers, students will also become aware of the relationship between cultural and literary transformation.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: No

LITR1-UC 6247 Classical Literature (4 Credits)
Typically offered occasionally
In this course students learn to recognize the central characters, metaphors, and ideas that comprise the classical consciousness of Greece and Rome. Works by Homer, Sophocles, Aeschylus, Virgil, Sappho, and others are studied both through traditional methods of close reading and the questions raised by structuralism and deconstruction. Students also acquire an understanding of classical literature as oral and theatrical genres.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: No

LITR1-UC 6248 Renaissance Literature (4 Credits)
Typically offered occasionally
The English Renaissance was a period, not unlike our own, of revolutionary transformation in the realms of science, religion, and politics. As the world moved away from closed feudal certainties toward increasingly open possibilities, it lost its sense of center and truth but promised new freedoms. In the Renaissance world of self-construction and overarching ambition, why does drama become the central form? How does poetry evolve? Students read writers such as Shakespeare, Machiavelli, Webster, Ford, Marvell, and Donne in their historical, theological, and social contexts.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: No

LITR1-UC 6249 Shakespearean Tragedy (2 Credits)
Typically offered occasionally
Students read four of Shakespeare's tragedies in the context of their Shakespearean world view and attend performances and/or view films.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: No

LITR1-UC 6250 Literature in The Age of Chaucer (4 Credits)
Typically offered occasionally
Covers literary texts of the Middle Ages in their historical, theoretical, and social contexts, with an emphasis on the works of Chaucer.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: No

LITR1-UC 6251 Literature and the Environment (4 Credits)
Typically offered occasionally
Introduction to Literature: The Craft of Reading or permission of the coordinator). This course explores literary treatments of the environment in a global context. How have various authors explored the interaction of human beings with our natural environment? How has nature been represented and how have these representations changed our social, ethical and political metaphors?
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: No

LITR1-UC 6252 Contemporary Genres: (2 Credits)
Typically offered occasionally
This two-credit Contemporary Genres course focuses on a variety of contemporary experimental and hybrid forms that blur the edges of the traditional genres of poetry, fiction, and nonfiction. Students may take this course with a different subtitle twice for a total of four credits.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: Yes

LITR1-UC 6256 American Literary Encounters: British, Native American, Hispanic, Black Voices (4 Credits)
Typically offered occasionally
A survey of the literary and rhetorical interaction of voices shaping American identity through literature. Beginning with the earliest work about the encounter of European and Native inhabitants, students study traditions such as Native-American, European-American, and African-American within their cultural and historical context. Readings are selected from both conventional works and oral and sacred traditions.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: No
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Course Code</th>
<th>Course Title</th>
<th>Credits</th>
<th>Grading</th>
<th>Repeatable for additional credit:</th>
<th>Repeatable for additional credit:</th>
<th>Repeatable for additional credit:</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>LITR1-UC 6261</td>
<td>African &amp; African American Literature (4 Credits)</td>
<td>(4)</td>
<td>UC SPS Graded</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LITR1-UC 6262</td>
<td>Mysticism, Faith, and Science (4 Credits)</td>
<td>(4)</td>
<td>UC SPS Graded</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LITR1-UC 6263</td>
<td>Latin American &amp; Latino Literature (4 Credits)</td>
<td>(4)</td>
<td>UC SPS Graded</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LITR1-UC 6268</td>
<td>Literature &amp; Desire (4 Credits)</td>
<td>(4)</td>
<td>UC SPS Graded</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LITR1-UC 6270</td>
<td>Shakespearean Comedy (2 Credits)</td>
<td>(2)</td>
<td>UC SPS Graded</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LITR1-UC 6274</td>
<td>Shakespearean Hist Plays (2 Credits)</td>
<td>(2)</td>
<td>UC SPS Graded</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LITR1-UC 6275</td>
<td>Literature of The Industrial Revolution (4 Credits)</td>
<td>(4)</td>
<td>UC SPS Graded</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LITR1-UC 6277</td>
<td>American Literary Traditions I: 1800-Present</td>
<td>(4)</td>
<td>UC SPS Graded</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LITR1-UC 6278</td>
<td>18th Century English Literature (4 Credits)</td>
<td>(4)</td>
<td>UC SPS Graded</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LITR1-UC 6280</td>
<td>Literary Theory &amp; Criticism (4 Credits)</td>
<td>(4)</td>
<td>UC SPS Graded</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LITR1-UC 6281</td>
<td>Psychoanalytic and Marxist Literary Theory (4 Credits)</td>
<td>(4)</td>
<td>UC SPS Graded</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
<td>No</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
LITR1-UC 6282 Major Authors:  (2 Credits)
Typically offered occasionally
Introduction to Literature: The Craft of Reading or permission of the coordinator). This two credit Major Authors course allows for close inquiry and analysis of one author or a set of authors from a given historical period. Students may take this course with a different subtitle twice for a total of 4 credits.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: Yes

LITR1-UC 6290 Sp Tpcs in Literature  (2-4 Credits)
Typically offered occasionally
Focuses on a different theme or topic each semester, for example: modern poetry or literature, an issue in media studies or a major author. The specific topic is listed in the course schedule for the semester.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: Yes

LITR1-UC 6294 Power, Money and Property  (4 Credits)
Typically offered occasionally
This course begins with the bawdy and turbulent 18th century, when invective, satire, the enlightenment, and the novel evolved. Students read the satire of Swift, Pope, and Dryden, and consider the effects of the Industrial Revolution on the Romantic sensibility of authors such as Byron, Wordsworth, and Keats. They witness the repression of the Victorian Age in works such as Jane Eyre and Hard Times.
Grading: UC SPS Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: No