COLIT-GA 2122 Conspiracy Theories: (4 Credits)

Typically offered occasionally

It is no secret that we live in an age of paranoia, our times distinguished by a heightened concern about surveillance that is far from pathological, and a disturbing return, since 2015, to what Richard Hofstadter in 1964 termed "the paranoid style in American politics." Our seminar is thus an attempt to gain an orientation in these times by engaging in a close and critical reading of texts and sources of theory about paranoia, from Daniel Paul Schreber's Memoirs of My Nervous Illness and Freud and Lacan's readings thereof, to works by Melanie Klein, George Orwell, Michel Foucault, and Gilles Deleuze, and others. Close attention will also be devoted to documents relating to WikiLeaks and to two of the best known whistleblowers of our time, Chelsea Manning and Edward Snowden. In broader terms, this course is designed as opening the question of the relevance of psychoanalytic theory to the analysis of texts both literary and political in a time of rapidly changing media and communications technology.

COLIT-GA 2875 Topics in Translation (4 Credits)Typically offered Fall

Variable selected topics in the theory and practice of translation aiming at elucidating its centrality to comparative literature and interdisciplinarity. Framed by the cultural turn in translation studies, this series explores the poetics and politics of translation in conjunction with a range of phenomena (such as globalization and new media), concepts (for example, cosmopolitanism and world literature), and theoretical issues (reception theory and postcolonial theory). Topics include but are not limited to translation in relation to imperialism and/or postcoloniality; translation, theory, and practice: a vexed relationship?; reception theory and translation; translation in adaptation; translators? testimonies.

This seminar examines varieties of temporal experience in modern philosophy, poetry, prose, the history of science, and cinema. We will study how conflicts of interpretation over temporal experience—and on the nature and limits of lived, chronological, narrative and historic time—led to some of the most enduring psychic and stylistic shifts in modernity. From Bergson, Einstein and Freud to Chaplin, Woolf, and Senghor, time becomes one of the central concerns of modernism in literature and critical theory.
