Funding Program for Full-Time PhD Students

Full-time NYU Steinhardt PhD students are eligible for a generous funding package that includes a scholarship and living stipend.

The Steinhardt Fellows Program

The basic, full-time PhD funding package includes an annual stipend, tuition scholarship for required coursework, and student health insurance through the fifth year. Complete details are provided with each offer of admission.

Research Assistantships

Some PhD students may be appointed to a Research Assistantship. Research Assistants are funded by external grants and work with a principal investigator on a funded research project. Unlike Steinhardt Fellows, Research Assistants agree to work 20 hours per week on an ongoing research project, typically with a team of faculty and other students. For the duration of the assistantship, Research Assistants receive funding that includes a tuition scholarship for required course work, student health insurance, and a stipend. Research Assistants may not perform additional work assignments such as teaching or grading during their 9-month appointment.
