International Students

In addition to the standard educational expenses associated with the NYU Law School cost of attendance, international students should expect added financial obligations related to relocation and transition to studying in the U.S. (i.e., VISA fees, SEVIS, international travel, settling in, etc.). For your reference, we have included a list of some of the estimated fees incurred by a typical NYU international student:

- Estimated U.S. Visa Application Fee: $185
- Estimated SEVIS Fee: $220-$350
- Estimated NYU Global Services Fee: $90-$100 per semester
- Estimated Early Arrival Health Insurance Fee: $368-$409<sup>1</sup>
- Estimated Early Arrival Daily Housing Rate: $66-$136<sup>1</sup>

In addition to the above fees, expenses for international travel and costs associated with settling into a new residence in a foreign country can vary widely depending upon individual circumstances. International students should expect that they will need to cover such additional expenses [not included in the standard Student Expense Budget] of at least $1,500 to $5,000.
