Program Overview

The Department of Classics explores all aspects of the Greek and Roman worlds, including their languages and literatures, art and archaeology, history, philosophy, religion, politics, economics, and law. We also feature courses on comparative studies of the ancient world beyond the Mediterranean, and the modern reception and transformation of classical literature, art, and philosophy. This broad interdisciplinary approach to these cultures that have had a major role in shaping Western values and thought provides an excellent undergraduate education. Similar to other liberal arts majors in Philosophy, History, or English, our graduates go on to careers in education, law, medicine, business, politics, and the media.

The department offers courses in both English translation and the original languages. Several majors and minors are available, some in conjunction with the Departments of Anthropology and Art History and with the Alexander S. Onassis Program in Hellenic Studies. Academic internships, an honors program, the opportunity to participate in an archaeological excavation in Cyprus, study away programs, and individualized study are also available.

Classroom instruction is supplemented by a variety of activities. In addition to film screenings, lectures, and field trips sponsored by a lively Classics Club, students have access to the superb collections of antiquities at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Brooklyn Museum, the American Numismatic Society, and the Pierpont Morgan Library, as well as to the department's own collection of antiquities. Finally, opportunities for travel and study abroad are available in Greece, Italy, and other Mediterranean sites.

Honors Program

Departmental honors in the major in Classics are awarded to selected students who apply for admission to the program through the Director of Undergraduate Studies in the Department of Classics by the spring of their junior year. Honors candidates are expected to meet all the requirements for the major and maintain a minimum GPA of 3.65, both overall and in the major.

Students in the honors program must complete a total of ten 4-credit courses (40 credits). These must include: two semesters of the senior honors sequence CLASS-UA 295 Senior Honors Seminar (fall; 4 credits) and CLASS-UA 297 Senior Honors Thesis (spring; 4 credits). The faculty member guiding the student in these two courses will be the chosen thesis advisor.

Students have the option of taking CLASS-UA 295 (fall) and CLASS-UA 297 (spring) in addition to the ten courses (40 credits) required for the major. In that case, these courses are each taken for 2 credits. This must be approved by the Director of Undergraduate Studies.

In addition to coursework, students must complete a senior honors thesis based on original research, developed under the supervision of a faculty advisor. The thesis is completed as part of the two senior honors courses. It is expected that a final polished version of the thesis will be complete by the penultimate week of April of the senior year.

Admissions

New York University's Office of Undergraduate Admissions supports the application process for all undergraduate programs at NYU. For additional information about undergraduate admissions, including application requirements, see How to Apply (<https://www.nyu.edu/admissions/undergraduate-admissions/how-to-apply.html>).

Program Requirements

This major requires ten 4-credit courses completed with a grade of C or better (courses graded Pass/Fail do not count) as follows: two years of both college-level Ancient (not Modern) Greek and Latin through the Intermediate II level (CLASS-UA 10 Intermediate Greek: Homer and CLASS-UA 6 Intermediate Latin: Virgil, respectively, or the equivalent; eight courses/32 credits) and at least one advanced course in both Ancient Greek and Latin or two advanced courses in either one of these languages (two courses/8 credits). Students who place out of, or ahead in, either or both of the classical language sequences and take fewer than eight language courses must take additional major electives in advanced language and/or classical civilization to complete ten courses and 40 credits.
