EN-UY 2114 Poetry as Structure and Design (4 Credits)
Typically offered occasionally
Following (and challenging) William Carlos Williams's definition of a poem as "a machine made of words," this course examines how poems are made. The course explores questions of invention and innovation in poetic form and how "form" and "content" interact in a wide range of poetry—from the earliest English ballads to contemporary work. Students write five critical essays. Prerequisites: Completion of first year writing requirements. Notes: Satisfies a HuSS elective.
Grading: Ugrad Tandon Graded
Repeatable for additional credit: No

EN-UY 2254 Literature and War (4 Credits)
This course explores how literary depictions of war have changed over time. We begin with early examples such as Virgil's "Aeneid," "Beowulf," and Shakespeare’s “Henry” plays, in which war is closely identified with heroism and coming of age and move onto later examples such as Vonnegut’s "Slaughterhouse-Five" and O'Brien's "The Things They Carried," in which participating in war is portrayed as a more troubling activity. In addition to literature, we will address theoretical readings on the impact of new technology on the language of war. | Prerequisite: Completion of first year writing requirements

EN-UY 2334 Literary Inventiveness (4 Credits)
This course explores not the subject of “innovation” in literature, but the fact of it. Students read a range of literary texts that invented utterly new ways of writing: new forms and new approaches to consciousness and language itself. The course focuses on two clusters of literary and linguistic innovation: (1) writing in the ancient world, where narrative, drama and lyric—and indeed, the technology of writing itself—were first invented, and (2) works by pioneering literary modernists who radically reinvented the forms forged by their earliest predecessors. | Prerequisites: Completion of first year writing requirements Co-requisites: None. Notes: Satisfies a HuSS elective.

EN-UY 2534W Science, Technology, and Literature (4 Credits)
Typically offered Fall and Spring
This online course examines how diverse authors of literature have approached and continued in critically evaluate developments in both science and technology. This course will introduce students to major works in the literary canon through the lens of scientific developments. The historical topics that we will address are the advent of the printing press, the Copernican revolution, Enlightenment thought, the impact of the Industrial Revolution, the rise of modern warfare, medical advances, and ultimately, the age of the Internet. In particular, we will study how writers portrayed the individual and society as well as examine social interactions in the scientific world. How did the introduction of literature of the "masses" ultimately transform plot, character development, and the objective of narrative fiction? Authors and works we will read include: Anonymous, Everyman, William Shakespeare's Sonnets, Jonathan Swift's Gulliver's Travels, Voltaire's Candide, Stephen Crane's The Red Badge of Courage, Marcel Proust's Swann's Way, George Orwell's 1984, and Donna Tartt's The Secret History. | Prerequisites: EXPOS-UA 1 or EXPOS-UA 4

EN-UY 3144 Analytical Approaches to Poetry and Art (4 Credits)
The poems of John Ashbery and the art of Richard Serra confront the respective reader/viewer: find a methodology based upon the structural configuration of the poem and sculpture to enable a "reading" of the work. The works that will be addressed reject impressionistic, subjective commentary. The beauty of word or artifact is not applicable. Post-1900 non-referential sculptures and paintings will be juxtaposed with poems that dissociate themselves from narrative content, poems whose only subject matter is language configuration — even when there is apparent thematic material — poems of Robert Creeley, John Ashbery, Emily Dickinson, Robert Frost, Wallace Stevens, Amy Clampitt, Susan Howe, Michael Palmer, Clark Coolidge, and Louis Zukofsky. The poets so listed complement preoccupations of artists such as Mark di Suvero, David Smith, Richard Serra, Anthony Caro, Donald Judd, Carl Andre, Vito Acconci, Robert Smithson, and Marcel Duchamp. | Prerequisite(s): Completion of first year writing requirements
Grading: Ugrd Tandon Graded

EN-UY 3814 The Environment and Literature (4 Credits)
Nature as an inspiration for writers is not new. Concern for the environment, both indoors and out-of-doors, is not new. Recently, however, the critical discipline of ecocriticism has emerged as a way to study the relation between the environment and poetry, drama, fiction, and non-fiction drawn from the traditional literary canon. This course will study some of those works and the many implications of this relationship. Works of art may supplement the readings. | Prerequisites: Completion of first year writing requirements.
